

Iván Carrillo, Legislative Advocate Biography

Iván Carrillo has worked in advocacy and policy making since 2009. Iván entered the Legislature through the prestigious Assembly Fellows program. During his seven years in the Legislature, Iván secured funding, advanced policies, and created programs to support students and educators. Through his experience working in both Capitol and district legislative offices, Iván developed a unique and valuable perspective of how to intersect grassroots advocacy and policy making to create change.

Iván is an alumnus of UC Davis where he was the first community college transfer student and second Latino to be elected student body president. Iván is also actively involved in the community, serving as Vice President of Fundraising for the Chicano Latino Youth Leadership Project (CLYLP) -- a nonprofit which provides leadership development opportunities to high school and undergraduate college students. Iván and his wife Tiffany are the proud parents of their one year old son, Luca Andrés.

Iván handles issues related to pensions, student attendance and truancy, alternative education, adult education, career technical education and ROC/P's, alternatives to discipline and graduation requirements. For questions regarding these issues, contact Iván at icarrillo@acsa.org.
